

MASTER THE ART OF FACILITATING PRODUCTIVE AND ENGAGING VIRTUAL MEETINGS

By Cecilia Yeung and Deane Lam | October 2020

Leading a meeting in a pre-COVID world was already a difficult task, even for an experienced meeting leader. Challenges include maintaining attendees' interest, focusing on agenda topics, managing conflicting interests/agendas and achieving a collaborative outcome, just to name a few. Today in 2020, meetings, conferences, trainings and other workplace communication are mostly conducted virtually, adding many new layers of challenge and frustration to facilitating a session that is timely, productive, and engaging. When team members are expected to participate in back-to-back online meetings, planning/brainstorming sessions, status updates, e-training and discussion groups, it is no wonder we are dreading the next virtual session and experiencing "Zoom-fatigue".

With working remotely or WFH around the globe a mainstay for the foreseeable future, leaders are now tasked with learning or enhancing ever evolving skills in facilitating effective virtual meetings. Online meetings are critical for business outcomes from driving projects, solving problems and sharing critical information to team building, developing trust, maintaining relationships and training new skills.

Yes, there are new challenges but let us not ignore the advantages of working virtually; no commuting time, convenience, reduced expenses (travel, physical space), recording of sessions, availability of attendees and accessibility to international team members.

Whether you are new to facilitating online or already comfortable leading meetings in person/virtually, our comprehensive training will provide you with a FRONT TO END PROCESS and tools to support you in mastering your virtual facilitation skills with your team or any group situation.

DOES THIS SOUND LIKE YOU?

- You dread the next virtual meeting you must lead or attend
- You find it stressful to manage all the virtual meeting platform functions while presenting
- You usually do not have enough time to cover all the material or information you need to share
- You find it difficult to keep your team focused and attentive
- You see your team multi-tasking (checking emails, eating, talking on phone) and you do not know how to manage them
- You find that your team is increasingly demotivated and uninterested during your meetings
- Your participants usually have their video off and you are not sure if they are even listening
- YOU are bored yourself during the session while talking over your slides and data
- You do not know how to manage discussions when participants talk too much, go off topic or find it difficult to understand them (volume, accent, background noise)
- You feel paralyzed when people challenge your content or engage in debates with you or other attendees
- Your meetings typically end without a conclusion or productive result and you have to reschedule a follow up meeting
- You find yourself in multiple 1:1 follow up calls with meeting attendees because they did not get a chance to share their views or they did not get the information they needed from your meeting

AFTER ATTENDING OUR WORKSHOP, EXPECT TO CONFIDENTLY:

- Design and prepare your meeting agenda and outcomes for maximum effect
- Manage pre-meeting preparation and use time saving techniques for running an efficient meeting
- Present yourself professionally on video
- Host meetings effectively and collaboratively with a diverse group of participants
- Anticipate and manage technical issues with ease
- Follow your agenda and run your meetings smoothly
- Build rapport, connection and team collaboration
- Read the body language and nonverbal cues of your audience
- Keep your attendees engaged, focused and motivated during your meetings
- Master the meeting progress efficiently by using breakout rooms, polling, whiteboard, chat and other useful functions
- Handle the 4 Ds: Difficult situations, Disagreements, Disruptions and Dysfunctional behaviors
- Bring your discussions to a desired outcome or group consensus
- Develop your unique style of facilitating online
- Close your meetings with the 3 Cs: Clarity, Conclusion and Commitment
- Follow up with your meeting participants in a professional manner
